A3 - HELLO

TYPE:	LIVE	REPORTER:	Jay Fernando
STATUS?:

Hello and welcome to News Munch, your look into the weird and wonderful in Kent. I'm your host Jay Fernando, and here are your panellists today, co-hosts of our award winning radio show, Frazer Norwell, and Brad Gray.

TYPE:	ULAY	REPORTER:	Jay Fernando
STATUS?:

Before we get into discussing this month's stories, here are your weird news headlines:

{PLAY ULAY}

Franchise restaurants in Kent are closing due to less customers and stock costs rising, but does this lead to better opportunities for independent chains?

As the threat of a no-deal Brexit looms large, farms around Kent may have to step up production. Is this a chance for the blossoming Kent hazelnut farms to thrive?

Collectors in Kent are seeing big returns on items that surprise most, but is it a viable marketplace? Or just a hoarder's dream made real?

And lastly, Kent council by-laws cover everything, from food on the high streets to rollerblading in Thanet, but have they stood the test of time?

A5 - RESTAURANTS

TYPE:	LINK	REPORTER:	Jay Fernando
STATUS?:

Many franchise restaurants in Kent have moved out from the county completely over the last few years.

This has left space for independent restaurants in Kent, with many taking to claiming customers in increasingly unique ways.

From hot wings, to man vs food challenges. Dylan Donnelly went to find out more about them.

STATUS?:

As Brexit approaches, farmers are preparing for the increasingly worrying concern that the country won't have enough imported food.

Farms across the UK are strained, but some may view the event as an opportunity.

Holly Tidwell has more on this from an unlikely place: A hazelnut farm, right here in Kent.

00:00:18

TYPE:	LINK	REPORTER:	Jay Fernando
STATUS?:

Kent is home to some strange bylaws, from dog walking bans in Margate, to rollerblading restrictions in Thanet.

Part of this can be because of its strange council system. With no centralised council, district and unitary authorities across Kent have had to enforce a variety of different laws. Some being more weird than others.

Dylan Donnelly has more.

People around the world collect things for a lot of reasons: Ranging from sentimental to potential reselling.

But after an Osama Bin laden branded matchbox was spotted at the British Matchbox Label Society in Detling, we're asking just how valuable are the random things you've collected?

Dylan Donnelly, avid record collector and general obsessive, has more.
